CANADA'S NORTHWEST.

A Formidable Competitor With Our Own Northwest.

The great Northwest, as commonly anderstood, has been transferred from Nebraska, Dakota and the American Territories by the process of immigration, in which the nearly completed Canada Pačific Ra Iroad has been an important factor, to a country midwas between the Atlantic and Pacific, and north of our border. Regarded untiwith n a brief period as practically un inhabitable on account of the severt of the climate, recent events have allown it to be growing into a rich, well populated, valuable country.

katchewan, where Riel is striking a blow for the rights of the half-breedles close to the eastern side of the Rocky Mountains, and contains sixty thousand inhabitants. Battleford, the targest town, has a population of five thousand, and there are six other places of sufficient importance to support newspapers.

The Prov nee of Manitoba, so much talked of by Canadian immigrants, and the lifteen bus dixed dollars had been tre-mently mentioned in connection spent, in add tion to the money he had with the Riel uprising, lies to the previously drawn, south and east of the Territory On another of niready mentioned. It is smaller had invited some friends to dimer. As in extent, but much more populous. Winnipeg is the principal town, and contains eight thousand the contains eight thousand the market with bin. John came down and the market of the Northeader. and the center of the Northwestern and saty-nine dollars, and the exportduring the same time were one million nine hundred and eighty-eight thousand even hundred and twenty-eight do lars. Half a million dollars of exports were sent to the United States, which in turn exported into that country four mill on five hundred thousand dollars' worth of property. The most of the remaining business is done with Eastern Canada, which sent last year nearly five million dollars' worth or goods

It is further shown by the report of the Consul that while the exports o' turs decreased ninety thousand dollarswithin the year, the export of wheat mereased nearly one million dollars w thin two years, and it is estimated that the surplus of 1885 will be fully three million bushels. A country capable of developing at this rate must acknowledged to be something be s des a howling wilderness, and will speed by become a formidable competitor with our own Northwest in the wheat markets of the world .- Toledo

FENCES.

The Law Which Regulates Their Erection

Though every thrifty farmer who is a "good calculator" put most of his fences in good order, so far as it could be done in the more leisure periods of inte autumn and early spring, after or before active field work could be done, some fences were so situated on wet or frozen or snow-covered ground that Lttle could be done with them before the thawing out of the soil, and almost every farmer has some new fencing to be built now, or at least some old that needs repairing. And the setting of posts and the stringing of wires frquently brings questions of fence law into painful prominence. That farme who has never had any fence disputwith the owner of adjoining farmcan consider himself exceptionally fortunate.

By the common law rule, every man is obliged to keep his cattle on his own land, and if they stray he is bound to pay all damages. This rule prevails in the old and long-settled States of this country. At the West about the only States which follow this rule are Indiana, Michigan and Minnesota, The object of a fence, at common law, as existing in the aforementioned States, is not to keep out the cattle of other people, but to keep one's own in. The contrary rule, that the man who cultivates his land must keep other people's oattle off, has been declared law in Ohio, Colorado, California, Missouri, Mississippi, Texas and most Western States and Territories. Where this latter rule prevails, the farmer who owns a cultivated field into which his neighbors' cattle break through improper feneing, not only can not re-cover for the damage done to his crop, but will further be held liable for damage which the stock may suffer from eating hartful food, or from any other of the hartful consequences.

In Pennsylvania, Illinois and Iowa rule about milway between the two above mentioned is made law. It has been held in these States that it is no trespass for stock to go upon unfeneland, but if the cattle are injured while upon such land the owner can not reover damage, although he can do so in the most of the other Western states. The reason of the law is laid down in the decision of the case of eelev vs. Peters, which was argued at great length and decided by the Supreme Court of Illinois in 1848. "However well adapted the rule of the semmon law may be to a densely pos-ulated country like England," say the sourt, "it is surely but ill adapted to a new country I ke ours. If this common iaw rule prevails now, it must have prevailed from the time of the earliest ettlements in the State: and can it be supposed that when the early settlerof this country located upon the borders of our extensive prairies, they brought with them and adapted as applicable to their condition a rule of law requiring each one to fence up h that they designed the millionof fertile acres stretched out before them to go ungrazed, except as each purchaser from Government was able to enclose his part with a fence? This State is unlike any of the Eastern States in their early settlement, because, from the scarcity of timber, it must be many years yet before extensive prairies can be fenced, and their luxuriant growth, sufficient for thousands of cattle, must be suffered to rot and decay where it ws, unless the settlers upon the r borders are permitted to turn their mittle upon them." Such was the opines of the Supreme Court of our State.

WEBSTER.

Expounder's Indifference in

Mr. Augustus Peabody, who was onnected with Mr. Webster in the usiness of his law office in Boston, sed to relate that on one occasion Mr. Velister had made all his preparations or a summer tour in his own carriage ith his wife, and had drawn the noney for his traveling expenses out of the bank the day before his intended toparture. The next morning the New York mail brought a letter to Mr. Vehster enclosing a check for fifteen undreddollars as a retainer in a great and case to which Mr. Astor was one the parties. This letter, with its tr. Webster's house, and found him ready seated in his carriage about to ike the road to Saratoga. He gave in the letter, and asked him to inare the cheek. Take this!" and he gave her dollar note which John had borrowed from Mr. Burritt. By and by he into the country over American rail- limshed his work and remarked to his servant: "Now, John, we will go to market." Down they went through Court and Washington streets Dock Square to the Quincy Market, below Faneu'l Hall. Mr. Webster bought of the butchers at the south end of the market what suited him, but made no payments, as he had accounts with them. At last they reached a vegetable dealer, of whom Webster also made a purchase, and was about to bass on as before when the faithful John arrested with the remark: "Mr. Webster, this man is a stranger to us; we never had dealings with him. "True," said the great lawver, "very true," and put his hand in his pocket for the money to pay the amount, Finding none, he said to his servant "John, I thought you gave me some money just now?" "So I did, sir." said John, "but you gave it to that poor woman who came into the office," "Ah!" said Webster, "so I did, but I had forgotten all about it. Well, John you must borrow some more mone and come down and pay these people and now we will go home." Ben Pe

THE HOME.

We Can Not Do Too Much to Make It Actractive.

ley Poore.

If home is everything, then we can not do too much to make it attractive. The man who says mere use is enough and beauty is folly, deserves only to be classed with the cattle he feeds, who have as much sentiment as he has. We are past that low line in our civilization where it is tolerated to say that anything that will answer is good enough. We want something more and better. Mere substance is not life. If it is, then what do the promises of immortal ex stence amount to. A home is, or ought to be, more than a stopping place merely, a place to eat, drink and sleep in. It should be the nursery of all gentle thoughts and loving affect tions. It should first develop the finer elements in our natures, and then b nd them together around a fixed center. Home is the nucleus of all future growth and goodness. It is the center of all our affect ons. It is the abode of contentment and peace. Therefore it is a spot to be adorned, within and without, to the uttermost; to be made pleasant and beautiful: to be embow. ered in trees and sheltered with verdur- COLEY. ous shrubbery: to be made inviting externally with a carpet of green grass. borders of fragrant flowers, and festoons of growing vines. Within, woman's tender care and refined instinet will convert it into an elvsium, we do not care how plain it is or how scant the resources for embellishment, country. Sun, air, water, grass, trees, uary, A. D. 1886. flowers, all are at his hand, and almost without money or price. He has more things to create an ideal home out of than any one else who could be named. Yet he seems as a rule to throw them all away, wasting his life in a covetous impatience at not having his lines east pleasanter places. If he could see it, and would make the most of it, he has it in his power to make all men envy him. No man's home can possibly be made more attractive than his. No man can live a life of such beaut ful plainness, such sweet and wholesome amplicity, such ideal independence. such nearness to nature, our common mother, such domestic integrity and undisturbed repose. As the family is called the unit of the state, so is the home the foundation of organized society and the hope of developing civilization. In the followation of organized society and the hope of developing civilization.

Can we any of us show too much devotion to it? Can we betray too great fondness for it? Can we expend either following an important of the proof in support of his measurably large return? To plant a shrub, a tree, a flower, or a vine is an easy thing; but each of these axids a caily beauty and grace to home that grows with a secret power in the heart grows with a secret power in the heart and holds us faster by the ties of kindred affect on.—Massachasetts Plough
